

When speaking of color deficiencies, it is common to show the reader or student what is being perceived. So I will try here with my synaesthesia. This is how I perceive words and numbers. I have my own code but every word, read or heard, appears in color in my mind. This is a very poor approximation of what I see. The diaphanous quality and a specific weighting scheme are missing, but I wanted to share something of my perceptual world nonetheless.